Objective:

I'm an ex HGV driver who has always enjoyed technology, but never knew where to start. Since not being physically able to work HGV any longer, I decided to pursue my interest in programming with help of family members who are software engineers.

I'm fairly new to programming but spend as much of my free time researching JavaScript and HTML/CSS. I also have pet projects to experiment with, and pair-programme to try understand how best to work in a team of developers - and gain insight into good programming practices.

Being naturally self-motivated, I am constantly setting myself goals - I believe that if a job is worth doing it's worth doing well. I am punctual, hardworking and see every job that I do, through to the end. Having worked in the armed forces, I am disciplined, follow instructions to a tee, and understand the importance of team work.

I hope to eventually solve real-world problems using technology, and finally kick-start a career in tech.

Education:

Heritage Secondary School

Awarded 6 GCSEs at grade A-D, including Maths, English and Science.

Other more specialist subjects including Resistant Materials - gave me a working knowledge of woods, metals, plastics and composite materials, which I later used in both my first job (fitting car parts) and my most recent job (cutting and joining aluminium).
